

Abstract

The invention relates to a method of treating patients infected with hepatitis B virus comprising the administration of both a nucleoside analogue and interferon- α over a prolonged period of time.

05689637 101300